De Mortuis Nil Nisi Bonum.

By RICHARD REALF.

De mortuis nil nisi bonum. When
For me the end has come and I am dead,
And little, voluble, chattering daws of men
Peck at me curiously, let it then be said
By some one brave enough to speak the truth.
Here lies a great soul killed by cruel wrong.
Down all the balmy days of his fresh youth
To his bleak, desolate noon, with sword and song,
And speech that rushed up hotly from the heart,
He wrought for liberty; till his own wound,
(He had been stabbed) concealed with painful art
Through wasting years, mastered him and he swooned,
And sank there where you see him lying now,
With that word Failure written on his brow.

But say that he succeeded. If he missed
World's honors and world's plaudits, and the wage
Of the world's deft lackeys, still his lips were kissed
Daily by those high angels who assuage
The thirstings of the poets—for he was Born unto singing—and a burden lay
Mightily on him, and he moaned because
He could not rightly utter to his day
What God taught in the night. Sometimes, natheless
Power fell upon him, and bright tongues of flame
And blessings reached him from poor souls in stress;
And beredictions from black pits of shame:
And little children's love; and old men's prayers;
And a Great Hand that led him unawares.

So he died rich. And if his eyes were blurred
With thick filins—stience, for he is in his grave.
Greatly he suffered; greatly, too, he erred;
Yet broke his heart in tryins to be brave.
Nor did he wait till Freedom had become
The popular shibboleth of courtiers' lips;
But smote for her when God himself seemed dumb,
And all his arching skies were in eclipse;
He was a-weary, but he fought his fight,
And stood for simple manhood; and was Joyed
To see the august broadening of the light.
And new carths heaving heavenward from the void.
He loved his fellows, and their love was sweet—
Plant daisies at his head and at his feet. Plant daisies at his head and at his feet, tells about her first speech and the black grenadine she wore to "The Daly Banquet," and how Mrs. Gilbert took her home at three-thirty in the morning to the scandal of the neighbors.

A Song of a Shirt

One of Mary Stewart Cutting's little serio-comic stories of marfied life.

Other titles are, The Fountain of Youth—The Gardendale Burglar Cure—Out of the Heart, by a Southern Woman—The Great Refusal—Mile-a-Minute Madness—and Poems, Pictures, Announcements, etc.

In the Interpreter's House Christmas Editorials full of gentle humor and sound sense—the choice and intimate contributions of the editorial staff on current events.

Straight from Mr. Dooley's heart "The Christmas Spirit" flows into the pages of the December Number of The American Magazine. Hennessey has caught it. Read it; you'll laugh and chuckle and catch it too. It'll catch you hard and leaven you up till you glow all over.

Science, St. Skinflint and Santa Claus

William Allen White's Christmas Talk. refreshes the heart and delights the mind. With whimsical pictures, Mr. White paints Science-"pale and blue-nosed, with skimmed-milk eyes, pointer in hand and chalk dust in her hair"-St. Skinflint-"straight-laced, weazen-faced god of Business''-Santa Claus-"forty-two in girth, thirty-eight chest measure-may be Uncle Jimmy who clerks in the store on Main Street." Newspaper Tributes.

On the demise of the late Henry Clay Payne, a concern in New York gathered from the papers published throughout the United States 4,685 newspaper stories of the life and career of the deceased.

These items were carefully mounted on Irish linen leaves and bound in 6 volumes, 400 pages to the book. A cover of genuine seal was appropriately lettered in gold and the entire material, representing the work of many people for several months, has just been delivered to Mrs. Payne at Milwaukee. Mr. Burrelle, who makes a specialty of this unique method of preserving family history, also compiled four volumes containing the letters, telegrams and cards of condolence received by the family, all constituting a family helrloom that will be handed down to future genera-
